

CHAROLAIS – GENOMICS SELECTION

The Charolais Society is anxious to be the leading beef breed in the use of genomic information to improve the speed of genetic progress and the accuracy of genetic evaluations.

The term “Genomics” is used to describe the study of the whole hereditary information that is encoded in the DNA (including genes and non coding sequences). Learning what variations in DNA underlie particular traits requires comparisons across individuals (a training population). For this reason we are anxious to create a bank of genomic data from a large group of Charolais sires that have established proofs. This genomic data can be taken from semen/blood or any good DNA source. For this purpose we need a range of bull types (including poor performers). Ideally 2 straws of semen would facilitate this for individual bulls.

If you have any semen of the sires listed below, please contact us ASAP
